Volume 95 MCMLXXXIX

Branch Out . . .

Welcome to Mortarboard 1989.

This year is a special one, both for Barnard College, celebrating her one-hundredth birthday, and for the class of 1989 upon graduating, a feat that would deserve applause in any year.

The combination of these two milestones have made the planning of this volume a sensitive matter. We wanted it to be a groovy commemoration of the Centennial, without forgetting that it is, of course our Senior yearbook. After some long nights (we expected those!), we arrived at a cool compromise for an awesome yearbook.

So for a trip down memory lane, you'll find pictures of those old familiar faces and places throughout the book. And for a neat look at Barnard's first hundred years, check out the special Century Book section, as well as the first pages of every section.

Before we sign off and let you read the rest of the book, we'd like to congratulate Barnard and all her students, past and present, on a truly amazing century. And of course, congratulations to all our fellow seniors!

We look forward to seeing students and school continue to grow and branch out into the future, as they have done so well in the past.

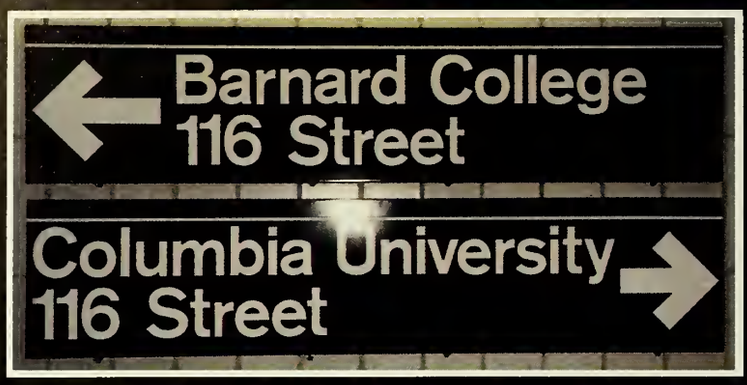
Birthday bash

The Barnard Bears join President Ellen Futter, alumnae, and students for the most exciting party of the century.

he Centennial Celebration helped kick off the chool year with class. The convocation at Rivrside Church began the historical event. As a ommunity, we then witnessed the dedication f Barnard's birthday present, Centennial Hall.



Top ten commuter comments:

1. I want a centrex number!!
2. I can't; I have to go home for dinner.
3. Did you buy your ten pack today?
4. Wow! The train is actually on time.
5. Is alternate parking suspended today?
6. I have to make the 5:31.
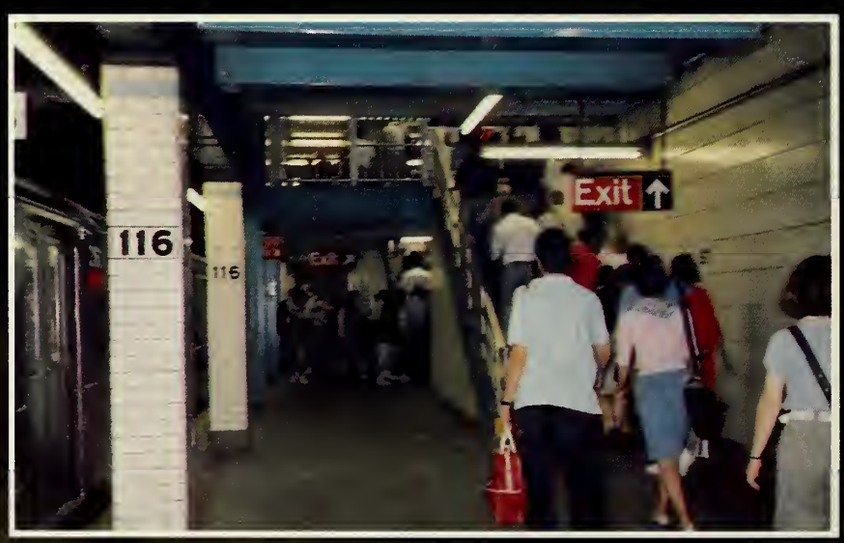
7. Who can I dorm with tonight?
8. Ten bucks for a commuter room?!
9. What commuter lounge? What showers?
10. Boy, could I use a luggage cart!
11. Watch the closing doors.



McIntosh. A veritable paradise of lavendar neon. Home of good pizza, repulsive coffee, lawn furniture, obsolete no-smoking signs, two non-working pay phones, incredibly good string quartets to chew with, plastic lids that don't fit the cups, itty-bitty mailboxes, Barnard junk mail and a pool table to dump it on.

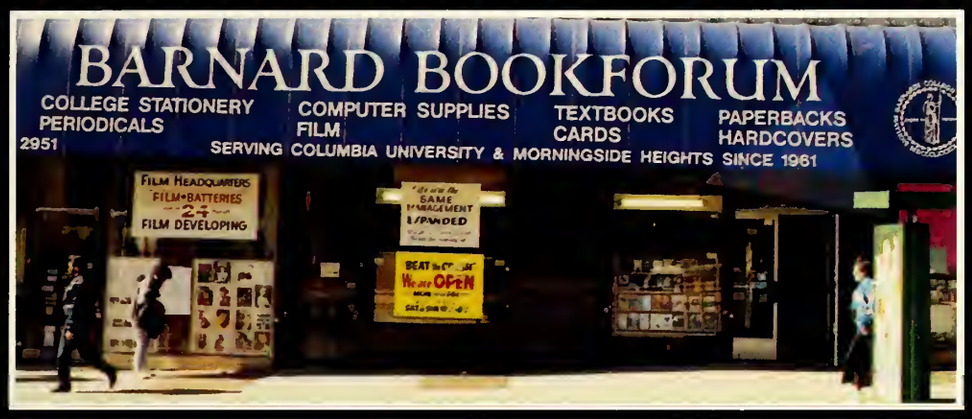
Good stuff. SGA, College Activities, the Stationery Store, the Bulletin, Piano Practice rooms, and one working pay phone. Food.

30¢ for a slice of out-of-season tomato.

Two women's rooms, side by side . . . Sisterhood is powerful.

Morningside Heights

Food certainly isn't hard to come by in this neighborhood!



Barnard students are lucky enough to live on New York's Upper West Side. A stroll down Broadway reveals a variety of street vendors, shops and restaurants.

Throughout the century the neighborhood has adapted to accommodate changing times. The corner of 116th and Broadway went from a sandwich shop in the seventies to Chock Full O'Nuts in the eighties. Rickie's of the fifties hoped to occupy the corner well into the nineties, but didn't survive the fall semester. Students awoke to find it replaced by Ollie's Noodle Shop & Grille.

It's been a year of victory for many. In the 23rd Olympiad, American medalists include such legends as Matt Biondi and Janet Evans, swimmers; Greg Louganis, diver; and of course those amazing Joyner women, sisters-in-law Florence Griffith Joyner (affectionately known as Flo-Jo) and Jackie Joyner-Kersee in track and field. In the World Series, the once-Brooklyn but now Los Angeles Dodgers were champs (Wait till next year, Mets fans!). And in the United States Presidential elections, well, we all know how that turned out!

Yet all these victories paled in the minds of Columbia students who will always bask in the warm glow of one particular victory. For finally, after a record five years and 44 losses, the football team finally won a game! Pandemonium broke out in the stands, and all over upper Manhattan, for that matter. The event made the top story on the evening news, and even got a headline in the New York Times reading "Columbia Wins! Yes, Wins!" Parties were thrown, T-shirts were sold, and soon everyone settled down to catch up on homework, looking just a little relieved.

Office of the President

To the Members of the Class of 1989:

You are Barnard's Centennial Class, and you graduate one hundred years after Barnard opened its doors to a small group of students in a rented brownstone in midtown Manhattan. Your class has witnessed a spectacular celebration of the College's Centennial, crowned--literally and figuratively--by the opening of Centennial Hall and a new spirit of community made possible by the Barnard quad.

As we reflect on our first century and look ahead to our second, each of you epitomizes what Barnard is about--bright and spirited young women who will bring energy and commitment to a nation and world in need of your talents and ideas.

In the years ahead we hope you continue to participate in the life of the College as devoted and informed alumnae, and we wish you good luck and much happiness in your personal and professional endeavors.

With warmest wishes,

Sincerely,

Ellen V. Futter

BARNARD
CENTENNIAL
1889 - 1989

DANIEL P. MOYNIHAN
NEW YORK

United States Senate
WASHINGTON, DC 20510

February 1, 1989

Dear Ms. Horowitz,

I would like to extend my congratulations to the entire College community on Barnard's centennial.

For the past century Barnard has been the leader in women's education. In the late nineteenth century Barnard was founded by pioneers in women's higher education. They established an institution that is committed to the values of the Arts and Sciences, learning, and scholarship.

In October of 1889 Barnard commenced operations in a rented brownstone with fourteen registered students and a faculty of six. From those simple beginnings Barnard has grown to one of the most prestigious institutions in women's education. It has an Alumnae of over 25,000 women, a faculty of more than 270 men and women in twenty-eight academic departments, and an enrollment of 2,200 students.

Today Barnard is an independent liberal arts college at the forefront of training women for positions of leadership in today's society.

It gives me great pleasure to congratulate Barnard on its first hundred years of accomplishment and wish it great success in its next.

Sincerely,

Daniel Patrick Moynihan

Dear Class of 1989:

On behalf of the City of New York, I offer heartiest congratulations as you graduate from one of the finest institutions of higher learning in the world.

Because 1989 is its centennial, it is fitting to include Barnard's alumnae and its faculty, past and present, in this salute to a century of excellence.

There are two great obstacles to developing a knowledge of affairs—shame, which throws a smoke over the understanding, and fear, which, once danger has been sighted, dissuades from going through with an exploit. Folly, with a grand gesture, frees us from both. Never to feel shame, to dare anything—few mortals know what further blessings these will carry us.

The war has challenged the very existence, the meaning, and the purpose of colleges. (We . . . have) therefore attempted to present a coherent and pictorial record of the way in which this year's activities prepared Barnard's students for the role they must accept in the war and the post-war world. The 1944 Mortarboard is a record of a year important not only in the history of Barnard, but in the history of the war and the world.

We have just completed a century unlike any other in history. In only ten decades, Barnard has survived two world wars, three stock market crashes, and any number of health epidemics. These hundred years have seen improvements in transportation and communication that have brought the world closer together, and inventions that have changed the way we live. Never before have major historical events occurred in such rapid succession, or fashions changed so quickly. Never before have man-made devices held so much potential for disaster and destruction. But what is most relevant to Barnard is the complete change in women's roles during the past hundred years. Since Barnard opened her doors, women have led reforms, won the vote, proven themselves capable and independent, and demanded full and equal participation in this new and ever-changing world. Today, as she enters her second century, Barnard continues to be a leader in both academics and women's concerns.

Tennis

THE TENNIS TRADITION

Intercollegiate tennis competition at Columbia University is more than 100 years old, but women's tennis in its present form — under the Columbia-Barnard Athletic Consortium — is just five years old. It began in 1983, when Columbia College admitted women for its first time.

Women's tennis on Morningside Heights started on the west side of Broadway, at Barnard College. Dedicated students and faculty, including the late Marion Phillips, long-time Barnard Physical Education Chair, were instrumental in the program's growth. With their help, Barnard was host to the first Seven Sisters Tournament.

When the Barnard courts were razed to make way for the McIntosh Student Center, Barnard's tennis pioneers persevered. In 1975 Barnard began formal varsity competition under coach Marian Rosenwasser. The team, composed entirely of players recruited after they arrived on campus, rose daily at 5:30 a.m. to practice on public courts. In its first season the team finished last in the New York State Tournament; by 1982 Barnard had risen to fourth in the state, led by Leesa Shapiro, '83B, who won the Division III singles championship.

Since 1983, women's tennis has been headquartered on the east side of Broadway, on the Columbia campus, as part of the unique Columbia-Barnard Athletic Consortium. Building on the athletic tradition begun at Barnard, women's tennis now competes on an NCAA Division I level and for the first time, in 1985, entered Ivy League round robin play.

Helping to place Columbia among perennial eastern tennis powers were former co-captains Amy Perkel and Leslie Gittess. From Perkel's immediate freshman contribution, the Division I New York State Singles championship, to both Perkel and Gittess' wins last year over Rutgers, the two established a winning Light Blue tradition.

Dedicated to helping women's tennis on Morningside Heights continue to grow, a group of former players and other interested Columbia and Barnard alumni, parents, and friends, have laid the foundation for Friends of Columbia-Barnard Tennis. Tennis alumnae including Kris Piirimae, Valerie Schwartz, Shari Teitelbaum, Philippa Feldman and Teresa Saputo perceived a need for a support group which could help make a difference for Columbia women's tennis. Friends of Columbia-Barnard Tennis help support the tradition of excellence Light Blue tennis has established.

Third year coach Eve Ellis watches closely from the sidelines. She and Assistant Coach Grace Kim have brought the team to a host of prestigious tournaments.

Radhi Majmudar, Lisa Abrams, Kohanya Ranch and Tina von Kessel take pointers from coach Eve Ellis.

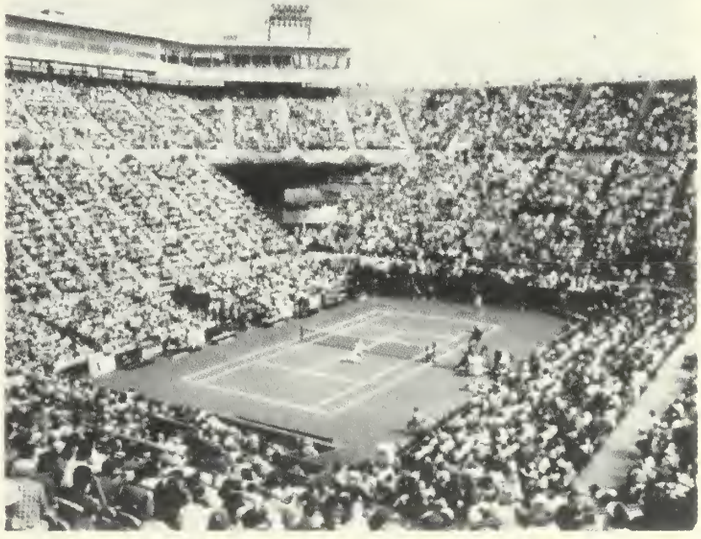
NEW YORK CITY

TENNIS CAPITAL OF AMERICA

New York, home of Central Park, Lincoln Center and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, is also home to the U.S. Open, the Virginia Slims Championships, the Masters, and the Tournament of Champions. It is home base to the United States Tennis Association itself.

Columbia University tennis players share the excitement of nearby professionals by taking advantage of the opportunity to train with those who train the pros.

Columbia netters often take study breaks with teammates and Friends of Columbia-Barnard Tennis through the year for The Tennis Hour, informal tennis talks with sports psychologists, journalists and tennis pros.



U.S.T.A. National Tennis Center, Flushing Meadows, New York

The New York metropolitan area contains some of the nation's state-of-the-art tennis facilities, such as the Port Washington Tennis Academy and the National Tennis Center at Flushing Meadows, where the athletes train to enter the U.S. Open's qualifying rounds.

In every way, from offering the very finest in competitive preparation to contact with national tennis media, Columbia works to find avenues for student-athletes to develop both as players and as people.

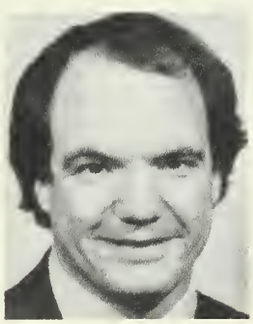
The Columbia commitment to excellence was formed with the likes of Vitas Gerulaitis, Eric Fromm, Rick Fagel, and Henry Bunis. With every new Columbia and Barnard player, that tradition grows stronger.

Swimming

THE CAPTAINS

"These three women together, epitomize our team. They are three different people, with different interests away from the pool, who share a commitment to the program. They have grown and improved and given of themselves to make this program the success that it is."

JEFF WARD



"Swimming at Columbia is special," says Lion head coach Jeff Ward. "Our team is for people who want it all: an education that is second to none and an exciting swimming program that will challenge each swimmer to reach her full potential."

The promise of the 1988-89 season is indicative of how the program has become one of the most successful in the east by developing swimmers in a positive, exciting atmosphere.

Head Coach Jeff Ward, above left, together with Assistant Coach Nancy Hogshead and Diving Coach Gordon Spencer, have put together a team to be proud of.

A Letter From Ula...

Dear Columbia,

If anyone had told me on my first day of practice with the Columbia Lions, way back in my freshman year of October 1983, that four years later I'd be playing professional basketball in Europe, I would have laughed in their faces. Professional basketball was a far-off dream that could only happen to others, and yet, here I am, playing professional basketball for the second straight year in Europe!

How lucky for me that Coach Kalafus saw that spark of talent and a potential for further development when she was recruiting me for the Columbia Lions! Let me tell you, it was not easy work during those four years. Much sweat and literally went into our gruelling practices. In addition to tell you, it was not easy (sometimes conditioning runs, our drills, our drills, our shine strenuous weight-lifting workouts, our dreaded suicide sprints. It is a credit to the training room staff which kept us in one piece throughout of that. But it kept paying off as our winning becoming more and more frequent, and we started a model for other teams to emulate - especially after we received an NCAA Championship bid. made a successful Division I tradition - The Columbia Lions emulate - especially character traits, but foremost I learned discipline -- not only on the court, but academic work. Thanks -- my academic per I won a Fulbright Scholarship to the University Salzburg, and because of my basketball offered a spot on a professional Austrian team, the Union Basketball Club of Salzburg. an offer I could not refuse. And suffice work towards a Ph.D. in sports

Spain last year I received rejection teams (the Netherlands, were especially eager), and I Luxembourg team. However, could not be transferred. Salzburg, and thus is where at the University of Salzburg conversation and grammar I am coaching a UBBC national championship winning the city championship Above, I am coaching the Preparatory School team. mendous, but my Columbia coach Nancy Kalafus had prepared me every minute of it!

Soccer

THE HEAD COACH

Shawn Ladda is no stranger to the needs of a brand new soccer program. She came to Columbia after building M.I.T.'s varsity soccer program from scratch, and wrote her master's thesis on the history of women's soccer in New England, becoming interested in the Ivy League's part in the birth of the sport.

Ladda graduated from Penn State in 1983 with a bachelor's degree in health and physical education. The Nittany Lions' top scorer, she played in the 1979 Eastern Championships, the first such competition for women's soccer. She made All-East and was a Mid-Atlantic All-Star for Penn State, and served as captain.

Ladda was the only coach the M.I.T. women's soccer team had had since the squad earned varsity status. Columbia's team is in just its third season.

"I like the soccer situation at Columbia," Ladda says. "I really think Columbia has the potential to be a contender, both in the Ivy League and nationally."

A native of Hershey, PA, where she was a scholastic tennis star at Hershey High, and the leading scorer in her youth soccer league, Ladda went on to become a four-year starter at Penn State.

THE ASSISTANT

Karen Garibaldi comes to Columbia this year from Harvard University, where she was assistant varsity soccer coach and head coach for the junior varsity squad. A four-year letter winner and captain as a senior Garibaldi was graduated from Harvard in 1987 with a B.S. in psychology.

A native of West Hartford, CT, Garibaldi attended William H. Hall High School and played on the Connecticut State Select Team in her junior and senior campaigns.

Garibaldi has coached at several soccer camps and was assistant coach for the under-19 Connecticut State Select Team.

Possibly as early as 1907, women were playing soccer at the the collegiate level. The game was played in physical education programs, in intramurals, and on play days between schools.

The Ivy League appears to have initiated the organization of teams in the early 1970's. Brown University boasts the original women's varsity soccer program. The first league tournament was held in November of 1978.

Since the AIAW and NCAA sponsored a women's soccer championship, the Ivy League has always been represented.

BOWLING

No sports section would be complete without mention of our Archery, Crew, and Fencing teams. All three have gained popularity in recent years in the realm of women's varsity sports.

Outside of varsity competition, Barnard women can do everything from aerobics and bowling to badminton and weight training, both in phys-ed classes or in intramurals. Individually, there are students who compete independently of the school, in such individual sports as figure skating, skiing, and racquetball. Barnard's Centennial has also revived interest in the Greek games, a sophomore-vs.-junior competition that began in 1905. The traditional event had faded from view in recent years, but is now making a comeback.

I.D.'s, please!

On this page we salute all those who have presided over residence hall front desks at all hours of the day and night to make sure that no one gets in who shouldn't. Sure, we may grumble about having to dig out our I.D. cards while juggling bookbags, groceries, and a dripping umbrella, and we may wonder why some dorms appear to have different sign-in procedures—or is that new guy on the job just confused again? —but deep down we all know it's for our own safety. By now our desk attendants have become familiar faces, a part of our daily lives as we rush, stumble, waltz, and schlep in and out of the dorms. Ray, Di, Adolfo, Viola, and the rest of the gang have become more than demanders of I.D.'s. For many students, they also provide a forum for such diverse topics as drawing technique, child care, practicing Spanish fluency, and current events.

Moonlighting: Like the T.V. show, Centennial Hall has an Agnes at the front desk. Our Agnes doubles as a student, rather than a detective.

We started our alumnae photo hunt with anticipation, wondering whether the 22 year-old faces of such notables as Margaret Mead and Jeane Kikpatrick would be any different from our own. To our dismay, we often came up empty handed. Did many of these women (Dare we say it?) have the foresight not to pose for their Senior Portrait? Doubtful. They way we figure, on picture day most of the alums on our list overslept. What follows is by no means a complete list of Barnard luminaries. We apologize for any omissions, but hey—this is Barnard, we can't keep track of everybody!

Rallies, banners and satirical T-shirts all signs of a Presidential campaign's effect on Columbia. As usual, many Barnard women supported the Democrats in 1988. Republican President Bush may have won, but he can expect these students to continue to let him know where they stand.

Students gather on Low Plaza for a Jesse Jackson appearance, top left. A T-shirt design expresses horror at the thought of Dan Quayle "just a heartbeat away," bottom left, while the Mike-Mobile delivers bumper stickers bearing the name of a Greek immigrant's son, above.

Mortarboard

March 1, 1989

To the Editor of the Mortarboard, Volume 195:

Over the past few months, my staff and I have had the opportunity to look at a lot of old yearbooks, and we couldn't help marveling at how much women's ideas and attitudes have changed in one hundred years. And so I couldn't help wondering what you will think of us in another hundred. Have our names become too old-fashioned? Do our clothes and hairstyles look really funny? Do our figures of speech seem hopelessly outdated? And does anyone still remember who Mark Harmon was?

All kidding aside, we were saddened to see the limitations placed on our great-grandmothers' aspirations by nineteenth century culture, and although we tend to feel a little superior because of how far we've come, we know there's still a long way to go. I wonder if you'll be able to achieve all that you want to; I hope you'll be surprised that I even had to ask. Things have changed so much in a hundred years that it's hard to predict what your world will be like.

It's been strange for us to realize that the women in those faded photos in those old Mortarboards were once young women like us, with hopes and dreams of their own. It's scary to think that you will be looking at us the same way. You might have as much to learn from our experiences as we did from theirs. After all, there are so many things about your world that make me curious: What kind of music do you listen to? What's the hottest new way to exercise? Will cancer and AIDS be curable? What aspects of your daily life are different from mine? We in the late twentieth century take such things as cars, telephones, and contact lenses for granted; what as-yet unheard of things will you be taking for granted at the end of the twenty-first?

Good luck with the yearbook. Even with the state-of-the-art equipment you will have, which will undoubtedly make you laugh at our word processors, I know what a hard job it is, especially in a centennial year. Best wishes to the Class of 2089, and congratulations to Barnard College on her Bicentennial.

Huyler's have received the following letter from Mr. Hoover

UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION
WASHINGTON, D. C.

November 19, 1917

My dear Mr. Huyler:

I would indeed be glad if you would undertake systematic work in the substitution of corn syrup, molasses, maple, honey and other sweets in candy manufacture, and if you would give preference to chocolate and other materials in confectionery which require less cane and beet sugar.

We do not wish to deprive the public of their sweet meats but we of course must reduce the consumption of cane and beet sugar.

Very truly yours,

Herbert C. Hoover

In response to this suggestion from Mr. Hoover HUYLER'S are now featuring HUYLER'S War Candies, in 1 lb. and 2 lb. boxes, at $1.00 a pound. All the candies and chocolates are of our regular manufacture, but selected for this package because they are made from materials of natural sweetness, or are flavored with syrup, molasses, honey or maple.

The value is in the candy. The box is incidental. The sugar saving is substantial.

TO MEMBERSHIP

Congratulations, and welcome to the Barnard alumnae network. Through the Associate Alumnae, you can find out what's going on at Barnard, where your classmates are, and how to locate an alumna who shares your career interest. You can attend special events and conferences, audit courses, swim in the Barnard pool, join a regional alumnae club, use the library, travel abroad, win a fellowship, and take an active part in alumnae affairs. As an alumna, you will be receiving the quarterly magazine, Barnard Alumnae, which regularly reports news from all the classes as well as the latest developments on campus. Be sure to keep the Alumnae Office informed of your current address and send us news of yourself and your current activities. We look forward to sharing ideas, opinions, and interests with you.

Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs

Dear Class of '89,.

I remember well the night of August 28, 1985, when I had a first glimpse of you--en masse! You may remember it too, and perhaps more awe-fully than I, for I recited "your" doggerel, and then I promised to resurrect it in your last year, and to add a verse:

You are the class of eighty-nine,
Hundredth in a distinguished line:
A singular place in the grand design--
The plaudits of history will surely be thine!

Yes, you are the class of eighty-nine:
Like powdered sugar, superfine,
Laid back and mellow as vintage wine;
As all-round sharp as a porcupine!

Your future is bright, exciting, benign,
Befitting a group already divine.
Nothing can throw you, however malign,
For you are the class of eighty-nine!

and now--

I used up, up there, the best of the "ines,"
But each one of them still truly defines
A class that is special, a class that shines,
A class that deserves to be eighty-nine's!

You have been a great class--those of you who began here and those who joined along the way--caring and fun-loving, ready to stand up for yourselves and for others. We know that you will make a difference. We will hear about you, but let us hear from you as well. Come back often--and not just for reunions!

Affectionately,

Barbara S. Schmitter

BARNARD
CENTENNIAL
1889 · 1989

The jungle is gone, "Jake" is forgotten, and rallies replace riots and rations. Dorm gatherings have evolved from corsetted mandolin players to poodle-skirted bridge players to sweatshirted Jeopardy players, and even the Lucerne is no more. And as we leave Barnard, looking eagerly if not apprehensively towards tomorrow, we join generations of Barnard women - our mothers, grandmothers, and even great-grandmothers - and become their sisters.

A century has passed. Four years have passed. Barnard's second century and our lives are just beginning.

Do you hear the people sing?
Say, do you hear the distant drums?
It is the future that they bring
When tomorrow comes.

— Les Misérables
